Buckingham Palace, Big Ben and Legoland are three of the most popular tourist attractions in the UK. Today we look at the people who keep these famous places clean and tidy.

Buckingham Palace

Buckingham Palace is the official London home of the queen of England. It employs more than 800 members of staff, from cleaners to gardeners, secretaries and chefs. The cleaners have to clean 775 rooms in the palace, including seventy-eight bathrooms, and they have to clean 760 windows every six weeks. There are also 7100 m<sup>2</sup> of floor to clean and vacuum!

Big Ben

The Big Ben clock tower has got four glass clock faces. Each face has got 312 pieces of glass and is 7 m in diameter. Every five years, specialist cleaners clean the clock faces. The clock faces are 66 m above the ground and they use ropes. Paul Harrison and Dave King don't have to clean any floors but they have to climb 334 steps to reach the top of the tower, and then they have to abseil down to the clock face. 'You should always use special safety equipment', says Harrison. 'And you shouldn't look down!'

Legoland

Every year at Legoland, the staff have to clean Buckingham Palace, Big Ben and many other famous tourist attractions. But they don't have to use ropes because the buildings are all models, one-twentieth of the size of the real tourist attractions. In total there are 80 million Lego bricks at Legoland. The whole job takes two days and staff have to use toothbrushes for the smallest models.

Sixty-five years ago, scientists called the first computer 'Baby'. But it was huge. It needed a whole room to itself! A team of people wrote three Math problems and then waited 52 minutes for Baby to find the answer to just one of them. At the time, this was amazing.

Computers are now both much smaller, don't forget your smartphone is a mini computer, and also more powerful. There is more power in a smartphone than in all the computers on Apollo 11, the first spacecraft on the moon! What's more, with new touchscreen technology, soon we won't need extra things like a keyboard or a mouse.

So, how will computers change in the future? A computer's 'brain' is in its chip and in the future scientists will be able to save much more information on this. So, computers will be smaller and even more powerful and they may even think like humans. In the future, we may not need to tell computers what to do because they might decide for themselves.

17. The first computer was _____

A very small

B very big

C a baby

18. Baby found the answer to _____ in 52 minutes.

Hello, my dear friend.

Today I moved to Moscow, <sup>the</sup> capital city of Russia with my family. We moved there because my parents many time ago wanted to live in Moscow. I like ~~the~~ Red square, that <sup>is</sup> very popular among tourists. I like it because there is a St. Peter's Palace. At Moscow there are very dark and sad people. I don't like persons like that anywhere. Anyway, Moscow is a beautiful city.

Write me soon,
best wishes.
